

Autumn 2007 at Twin Oaks

The 2007-2008 school year is now in full swing. Our little scholars have been eagerly participating in the fun and learning that is taking place in each classroom. Our teachers have introduced them to the world of letters, numbers, science and literature. The classrooms have come alive with an explosion of color and creativity, as projects have been proudly displayed.

Each class is experiencing the autumn season in so many wonderful ways. Many of our classes have enjoyed field trips. They pranced around at the pumpkin farm, they stopped, dropped and rolled at the Firemen's Museum and even met some friendly neighborhood police officers while visiting our local precinct. Even our youngest students are enjoying the fall festivities. We brought in our very own Pumpkin Patch with haystacks and all for our toddlers to frolic in. Each one was so excited to take home his/her very own pumpkin. Soon our theater buffs will be boarding the buses to see productions of "Who Took Tom Turkey" and "Frosty the Snowman".

Our little chefs have been cooking up some Fantastic Fall Treats. Delicious apple muffins, applesauce and pumpkin cookies are some of the sweet treats our tiny culinary masters have been whipping up.

Our adventurous explorers had a wonderful time re-enacting Columbus' voyage of 1492. They've been preparing their voting booths and are getting ready to vote, whether it is for their favorite book or most loved snack. We can hardly wait until our festive Thanksgiving Feasts, where we will find Pilgrims and Native Americans gathered around the table enjoying each other's company. .

The sounds of laughter can be heard all throughout the campus, as the weather has been nice enough for the children to play in our playgrounds. Before we know it our weather charts in our classrooms will display words such as "Snow" and "Frost" and our budding scientists will be leaning about how water can both freeze, melt, and form snowflakes.
